

Self-Presentation: Intercoll - A tool for the gradual emergence of a new “international collective intellectual”

Saturday 2 July 2016, by Intercoll (Date first published: 2 July 2016).

INTERCOLL PRESENTATION

Intercoll is an open space for the development and confrontation of social and citizen movements. It is run by individuals linked to those movements, and by anyone who is involved in social struggles and mobilizations. Intercoll aims to contribute to the gradual emergence of a new “international collective intellectual” from the reflection of movements and networks of research and public education related to them.

Intercoll aims to create an international and multicultural space. The website operates in six languages. The articles will all offer a brief summary of ten lines in the 6 different languages. Four steps will be implemented:

- Working groups on proposed and selected themes.
- The wall of questionings that will arise or should be asked by the social movements.
- An ongoing survey on the social movements' strategy.
- Texts published by other websites and selected by Intercoll for their interesting perspective.
- Events, seminars, conferences, various events in which Intercoll takes part.

Welcome on Intercoll

Here is the first draft of the Newsletter Intercoll, it will be improved based on your feedback.

Intercoll's website is now up and running !

Intercoll.net is an open space centred on development and the exchange of ideas through action and engagement. Intercoll aims to create an intellectual group of social and civil movements, with the help of people associated with these movements.

Intercoll is a multilingual and multicultural website already available in six languages : English,

Arabic, Spanish, French, Portuguese and Mandarin Chinese. The articles are published in the language they were originally written and ten line summaries are provided for all other languages.

Intercoll already has a number of different features including a network of partner sites, social movement sites, journals and editors, discussion forums about social movements, multilingual working groups, an ongoing investigation into movement strategies, and selected texts.

Intercoll is an open and inclusive space that anyone can participate in. It's all about questioning things and bringing strategies and causes together. Anyone associated with a movement can join a pre-existing working group or create a new one, post a question in the discussion forum, participate in the ongoing investigation, or suggest a site to become partners with Intercoll.

We look forward to hearing from you soon !

Elsewhere on the web

The section « Elsewhere on the web » proposes each month, one or two texts selected according to their interest in supplying the general debate on the situation and the alternatives from the perspective of social movements. A link to the first publication website will be posted on each article. This section is supplemented by texts proposed by partner sites, not exceeding one or two texts per site and per month.
